

MEYER GUGGENHEIM BURIED.

"His Success Was Not by Tearing Down," Says Dr. Silverman.

The funeral of Meyer Guggenheim was held yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, at the Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street. The interment was in the family plot in Salem Fields. Mr. Guggenheim died last Wednesday at Palm Beach, Fla.

Besides the seven sons and two daughters who survive Mr. Guggenheim, there were present at the temple fifteen grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Representing the various enterprises with which Mr. Guggenheim's name was linked were Edward Nash, President of the American Refining and Smelting Company; Louis Stern, President of the Republican Club; Isaac Wallach of the American Refining and Smelting Company, William B. Hackenburg, President of the Hospital Association of Philadelphia; Manuel Garcia of the City of Mexico, connected with the Guggenheim Exploration Company; Emanuel Lehman, Edward Lyman Short, attorney for the Mutual Life Insurance Company; Jacob H. Schiff, and De Witt Seligman. Floral tributes from the charitable and business institutions with which Mr. Guggenheim was identified were massed about the chancel.

The pall bearers were: David Leventritt, Justice of the Supreme Court; Louis Marshall, Nathan Fleisher, James Seligman, Gustave A. Goldsmith, Dr. Willy Meyer, David Adler, Charles Minzesheimer, Louis Spiegelberg, and V. Henry Rothschild.

With the entrance of the funeral cortège the choir intoned the "Kol Nidre." The anthems were "Oh, for the Wings of a Dove" and "Rest Thy Burden On the Lord." The recessional was Chopin's Funeral March. The Rev. Joseph Silverman conducted the services, and pronounced the eulogy. He said of Mr. Guggenheim in part:

"He exacted honest labor from those whom he employed. His ideal of success was achievement by building up—not by tearing down. He rose not upon the prostrate forms of others. Simplicity of thought and action characterized his every movement.

"Consideration for others which characterized his life is one of the highest virtues of man, and I would esteem it greater than that charity which is so often tendered us after we have caused our fellow-men pain and suffering."

The New York Times

Published: March 20, 1905

Copyright © The New York Times